DETAILED ACTION

Claim Objections

1. Claim 5 is objected to because the word "wherein" is repeated in line 2.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

2. Claim 6 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. The claim is indefinite because the phrase "the polymer is propylene" makes no sense.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

4. Claims 1-3, 5 and 7-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by JP 2002-47314.

Art Unit: 1713

The reference discloses polypropylene made using metallocene catalyst and having the claimed NMR values and insertion errors (Examples 1 and 2). Regarding claims 12 and 13, these unreported properties would appear to be inherent because polypropylene with the stated tacticity would be expected to have solubility within the claimed ranges. The burden of proof is shifted to applicants to show that the reference polypropylene does not have the claimed unreported solubility.

Applicant cannot rely upon the foreign priority papers to overcome this rejection because a translation of said papers has not been made of record in accordance with 37 CFR 1.55. See MPEP § 201.15.

5. Claims 1-6 and 9-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Minami et al. (WO99/67303). In view of the facts that the WO document is in the Japanese language and is exceedingly bulky (345 pages), the equivalent US patent which issued from the PCT application will be used herein (US 6,906,155). Should applicants require a copy of the WO document, they should make a request in the response to this Office action.

The reference discloses polypropylene made using metallocene catalyst and having the claimed NMR values and insertion errors (Table III-1, Comparative Example 2). Although the reference has not reported Mw, this property would appear to be inherent because applicants have claimed virtually the entire range of conventional Mw values for polypropylene polymers. Regarding claims 12 and 13, these unreported properties would appear to be inherent because polypropylene with the stated tacticity would be expected to have heptane solubility within the claimed ranges. Regarding claim 4, the reference has not reported the array of NMR peaks required in the claim; however, this property would appear to be inherent because the reference polypropylene has the claimed values of S5, S6, and insertion errors. The burden of proof is shifted to applicants to show that the reference polypropylene does not have the claimed unreported properties.
